Rumor Persists in Allied Capitals
That Monarchy Is to Be Restored Soon.

BERLIN ISSUES DENIAL

But Disputes From Brussels and
The Hague Assert Passports Have Been Issued to Former Monarch and Party: Concerted Action Doubtful.

By United Press.
LONDON, Nov. 12.—Rumors of ex-Kaiser Wilhelm's return to Germany, following his son's death into the fatherland, startled Europe today. Movements were on foot in all Allied capitals to restore sufficient wartime unity to head off the return of the war lord.

Reports from Brussels and The Hague that a German embassy had handed the former Kaiser 12 passports for himself and his entourage at Doorn set officials feverishly searching for means to keep Wilhelm out of Germany.

In view of the discussions among the Allies, however, it was feared that a decision on common action would be difficult. Although the British government will consider what steps should be taken, there was some doubt as to whether the Allies would be united to prevent the return of the war lord.

PARIS, Nov. 12.—Former Kaiser Wilhelm has received passports from Chancellor Stresemann of Germany to return to the fatherland, dispatched from Brussels reported today.

A dispatch from Berlin, filed there shortly before noon today, said the German government denied rumors that the former Kaiser is returning. It was reported the former Kaiser yesterday received J. H. Kain, secretary to the Dutch foreign minister, at Doorn for a long conference on the question of the war lord's return. The former German monarch also received friends from Germany and discussed the situation with them, it was reported.

Dispatches from The Hague received in Paris by the Agent Radio said the former Kaiser had received 12 passports to permit himself and members of his entourage to return to Germany.

Dutch newspapers were printing stories that the German monarchy would be restored on December 1 with the Kaiser himself on the throne. It was said a wireless apparatus had been installed at the castle at Doorn and that messages are received daily from Naumburg.

What steps the Allies would be able to take to prevent the rumored return, if the rumors turn to be well founded, were discussed today. France would have the strongest objections to his return, it was said, and the French government believes that Great Britain and the other Allies would agree on this point. Whether all policies could be harmonized to bring joint action was considered problematical.

BERLIN, Nov. 12.—Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm, enroute from Holland to his castle at Doorn, has delayed again today. Up to a late hour this morning the prince had not reached his castle, but presumably was in Sluis, near his home. The crown prince left Doorn last night without announcing her destination but servants believed she was to meet her husband.

PARIS, Nov. 12.—Premier Poincaré received what amounted to an expression of confidence in his policies from the French chamber of deputies today. Following his return to resign if the chamber insisted on discussing immediately the return of the former crown prince to Germany, his suggestion regarding postponement of this and other important questions were agreed to.

Reparations Body Will Hear German Experts on Capacity

By United Press.

PARIS, Nov. 12.—The Reparations Commission decided today to hear the testimony of German experts as to the capacity of their country to pay reparations. The decision was made in response to the German government's request to send experts to give evidence.

It had been postponed pending discussion of Secretary Hughes' proposal of an international expert committee to inquire into Germany's capacity to pay.

U. S. Court Closes Pottsville Saloon By 'Padlock' Order

By United Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 12.—The first "padlock" injunction closing a saloon in this district for one year, was issued today by Judge Thompson in United States District Court against John B. Fox, a Pottsville saloon keeper.

The injunction closes only two rooms on the first floor of the premises, one a barroom, the other a room where it was charged intoxicating liquors were served.

While the injunction is issued against the lower part of the building for one year Judge Thompson said that if the owner of the premises desired to convert these rooms, along with the others into a business other than a saloon or liquor trade the court could consider a modification of the order.

Vote on Impeachment Of Jack Walton May Be Taken Any Time

By United Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 12.—Satisfied that the case they have established against Governor Jack Walton already in strong enough to insure its impeachment, opponents of the suspended executive of Oklahoma sought today to speed proceedings to their conclusion. The board of managers of the house may vote its case against Walton at any time now and ask a vote of the senate, which is sitting as a special court of impeachment.

Anti-Walton senators who sought at an executive session last night to have charges against the suspended governor involving unwarranted proclamations of martial law withdrawn were blocked but attempted today to have a proposal to this effect come from the house.

The purpose of the move is to prevent Walton from introducing a bill of witnesses prepared in haste to impeach him by the Ku Klux Klan, which the governor will claim justified martial law.

"The house that Jack bought," the present executive mansion, purchased last spring by the governor with the assistance of mortgages and notes, which nobody wanted to buy until a public-spirited oil man came to the rescue, had its day in court as charge No. 4 of the 22 brought against the governor.

Some of Oklahoma's wealthiest citizens appeared on the stand to tell why they did or did not contribute to securing Walton his present residence.

Colonel Forbes Denies Charges Of Misconduct

By United Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—A conspiracy based on perjury and the suppression of material facts, "the purpose of which is to encompass my destruction," was charged by the former director of the Veterans Bureau, Charles H. Forbes, when he took the stand in his own defense today before the Senate investigating committee.

Colonel Forbes presented a prepared statement embodying the major features of his defense.

His statement said in part: "My purpose in this preliminary statement, which will be followed by a detailed examination by my counsel, is to follow in turn by cross-examination by members of this committee and its counsel, is to enter a general, sweeping and absolute denial of every charge, statement, insinuation and innuendo in any manner whatsoever reflecting upon the honesty and integrity of my official or personal conduct while I occupied the office of director of War Risk Insurance or director of the Veterans Bureau."

"I now deny generally and shall hereafter deny specifically and in detail, the utterly false and groundless charges of official and personal neglect, dishonesty, graft, liquor drinking, loose conduct and any and every other dereliction of duty, official or personal, which has been ascribed to me either by witnesses or charged against me by the counsel of this committee."

"It does not mean that my administration was blameless. I do not deny its imperfections. I do not seek to shift any responsibilities to others, but I do assert that I have not consciously been guilty of any wrongdoing, either by act or neglect."

The speaker referred to the courageous actions of American soldiers on the French battlefields and of the methods employed by German officers to make their men think the Yankees were few in number and would not fight in the face of machine gun fire.

In words spoken directly to the Legionnaires Judge Schoonmaker said: "You men have demonstrated your ability on the fields of France. Now it is up to you to bring your children up with these American ideals. No matter what happens in Europe tomorrow you have demonstrated your ability."

The judge remarked it could hardly be said the world had been "made safe for democracy" by the World War as despots were springing up in many places in Europe. He said America would be an ideal place to live if the people would live by the ideals they had in the World War.

Previously in the services Rev. W. P. Russell, assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian church, in behalf of Mrs. Puked (Edith) Kipperlek, presented to Milton Bishop Post, a beautiful hand-painted portrait of Marshal Foch, in memory of her husband, C. S. Kipperlek, the artist, Max C. Plett, commander of the Legion post, responded and at the conclusion of his address Kipperlek's Orchestra struck up the "Marsellaise."

The French national hymn "Two Legionnaires drew back an American flag displaying the portrait which rested on an easel on one side of the stage as the presentation address was concluded."

Correll J. Poole, deputy commander of the 24 District Department of Pennsylvania, American Legion provided and delivered the address of welcome. The invocation was by Rev. E. H. Stevens, pastor of the First Baptist Church. Rev. J. H. Lamberton, pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church pronounced the benediction.

In his address Mr. Poole said: "It is proper for us to bear witness that this anniversary is more than any other day of the year, the peculiar and particular day of those who served with the United States of America and Allies in the conflict of the nations. It is fitting for us to declare that it is also the American Legion's day, for both the event and the organization were born of the same agonies; and from the Legion in this city came the first efforts to make this a national holiday."

"We are here to again challenge those who would forget the incidents and the memories of our participation in the World War. We are here to perpetuate the true significance of this Armistice Day, lest it fall prey to our common enemy and be lost to the coming generations."

"We cannot add to the glory of those who gave their life for this land and this world might be saved from the despot; but here we can pay reverence, and renew our allegiance, to those great spirits who made possible this continuance of our lives, liberties, and pursuits of happiness. For these privileges we must reaffirm that our obligation is faithfulness to the trust reposed in us, and that our labors are the problems which stand between us and the goal of the brotherhood of man. Therefore it is meet that we reemphasize the past triumph."

WAR NOT FOUGHT IN VAIN

Speaking before an audience in the High School Auditorium Monday afternoon in connection with the Armistice Day celebration held here under the auspices of Milton L. Bishop, Post No. 301, Judge F. V. Schoonmaker, of the Federal Court of Pittsburgh, a World War veteran himself, declared the World War had not been fought in vain. That a nation which, like Germany, believed "might is right" was conquered was worth the war, he said.

On November 11, five years ago, Judge Schoonmaker said, he was riding through France on a train and recalled how the French people were even though it looked as if the nations were again ready to leap in the sword, the war had not been in vain when a people that considered a treaty a "mere scrap of paper" had been humbled.

"Germany thought America would not fight," he said. "How greatly she was mistaken. Yet, we are a peaceful nation."

The speaker referred to the courageous actions of American soldiers on the French battlefields and of the methods employed by German officers to make their men think the Yankees were few in number and would not fight in the face of machine gun fire.

Minister Must Not Expose Their Soles

CHICAGO, Nov. 12.—Ministers who sit in the pulpit with legs crossed and with soles turned up so the audience can see the patches on the bottom of their shoes and are otherwise careless in their manners were criticized at the Congregational ministers' meeting, yesterday by Dr. F. G. Ward, dean of the Chicago Theological Seminary.

"A minister had better wear black shoes in the pulpit and have them polished," said Dr. Ward. "It isn't good taste to have a fountain pen sticking out of the pocket of a sack coat. I would also suggest the choir has some rights, and it would be better to have the choir lead the singing instead of the minister trying to do it."

Often Wall Street Approval Is Signal
For Denunciation of Any Plan; Fear
Some Mid-Western Senators Will Oppose Secretary Mellon's Proposal.

By United Press.
NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Bankers, industrialists and railroad leaders here today were in hearty accord with the proposal for a reduction in taxes on earned incomes by Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury. Figures in New York's financial district, while for the most part preferring to withhold their names in connection with opinions on the subject, believed the proposed reduction would prove a greater boon to national industry and prosperity than any other single act that could be passed by Congress.

There was much doubt, however, that Mellon's recommendations would be followed. It was pointed out that several mid-western senators may exert their influence against the measure.

E. J. Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel Corporation, Paul Warburg, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, and John D. Rockefeller, chairman of the National Acceptance Bank, Jules S. Bloch of the New York Stock Exchange, Lewis L. Clark, head of the American Exchange National Bank, and other leaders are said to have spoken in highest terms of the plan.

"Wall street's approval of a legislative plan often means its damnation and for that reason we have learned to keep quiet," one of the biggest Wall street bankers is credited with saying. "In the present case, however, the proposed revision is so far-reaching a would benefit so many people, that this point could be properly waived."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Treasury Department officials took the position today that a tax revision program along the line suggested by Secretary Andrew W. Mellon would not only give very substantial relief to the smaller taxpayers, but was essential to the continuation of industrial activity on a basis which would prove most helpful to all classes of taxpayers.

It was said to be the opinion of Secretary Mellon that whatever might be the fate of the general proposals made, because of the attitude Congress takes ultimately in regard to bonus legislation, action by Congress to reduce the high surtax rates, which were driving capital to turn to tax-exempt securities for investment purposes, was absolutely necessary.

In this connection it was pointed out by the Treasury Department officials, among them Mr. Mellon, that the high surtax rates unquestionably were defeating the very purpose for which they were erected, namely, the collection of large sums in revenue from large incomes. The facts and figures in the possession of the Treasury Department, it is said, are unassailable evidence that revenues from large incomes were decreasing each year while investment in tax-exempt securities by those possessed of large incomes were increasing.

The process of the transfer of capital from industry to tax-exempt securities, it was stated, was forcing railroads and other large industries to pay higher rates of interest for capital necessary to their operation and such a situation could have no other effect than to keep up living costs and increase the indirect tax burdens of the ultimate consumers.

COKE REGION NOT DOWN AND OUT.

While there are certain slight indications that the curtailment of coke production, which has been in progress for some time, has proceeded about far enough to bring it safely within the consumptive requirements, there is yet no absolute certainty that such a balance has been established. There remains considerable unassigned coke on the plant sidings which shows that more has been produced during the past few weeks than consumers have need to be forwarded. The reduction in the number of ovens in blast has been drastic, those in running being only about 40 per cent of the available equipment. If it develops that a still heavier cut is necessary it will be made. Operators dislike to take the risk of disorganizing their plant forces by a complete suspension of operation but this has become a measure of necessity except in cases where there has been no suspension orders on account of contracts.

Much is being made in some quarters of the fact that consumers of furnace coke who were formerly users of the product exclusively have switched over to by-product. This change really has less significance than is being attached to it insofar as relates to permanent loss of trade from the local region. It is well known that by-product plants have economies in operation which, under certain conditions, enable them to sell their surplus output at prices the furnace operators cannot meet without taking a distinct loss. That has been the condition with respect to a recent shift in source of coke supply by a merchant furnace. It means that a fair sized monthly tonnage has been taken away from the Connelville region during the existence of the contract but, had it been accepted at the price offered, filling the contract here would have, in effect, amounted to giving the coal away. It is something the operators have warned the folly of doing.

Instances are not lacking in the history of the region when other contracts have gone to by-product ovens or to competitive fields and with singular regularity have come back again. When the iron and steel business is making heavy demands upon furnace coke equipped with by-product plants have to sell or surplus coke to sell, especially at prices which it applied to furnace coke would be unprofitable. It is by no means improbable that at a later date a similar condition will again develop, in which case some consumers now using by-product coke will welcome the opportunity to return to their first love. Even if they do not, the makers of by-product coke will still find it convenient to sell, and perhaps, necessary, to continue to depend upon the Connelville region for a large part of their raw material.

The Connelville region, like others, will have its ups and downs as in the past. At times it will be busy in both making coke and shipping raw coal. At others it will not be extraordinarily active in doing either, but it is not down and out as a fuel producing center by any means, even if the present state of trade tends to create a decidedly gloomy view of the situation.

Relief for Tax Payers

Pittsburgh Gazette Times.

Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon has indicated how Federal taxation may be reduced without detriment to the national well-being. This is keeping with the Republican administration policy of easing the people's burdens while maintaining government on a plan of high efficiency. Naturally his proposals are predicated on the assumption that there will be no departure from the policy of strict economy in governmental expenditures. If Congress does not order any marked increase of outgo, the treasury can forego revenues the gathering of which bear most burdensomely on the smaller incomes.

The secretary's plan contemplates direct relief for taxpayers by reduction of normal income taxes and a reduction of normal income taxes and a readjustment of surtax charges to encourage investment in productive business of capital. The new assets, the shelter of tax-exempt bonds, in the reasoned statement which Mr. Mellon has made to Representative Green, acting chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, it is made clear that lower percentages taken from larger incomes quite certainly would result in the long run in larger revenue to the government from this source. "The treasury's experience

Back of every success is a reason. Back of business success are earnestness, energy, persistence, concentration. Between these and achievement is advertising.
No man ever yet made a success of business without advertising of some sort. Maybe he didn't call it advertising, but it was advertising just the same.
Advertising primarily consists of telling a lot of people know you are in existence and what excites you may have for it.
When a man goes into business he has some cards printed, and when he meets an acquaintance thereafter, he picks out a card and says: "When you're down my way, drop in." That's advertising.
The trouble is that he cannot repeat the operation often enough—personally. What he can do is to put the card and the remark, more or less elaborately expressed, into such a paper as The Courier and have it handed to Connelville people all in one day.

The difference in men that makes one do this and another refuse to do it, is that the one who does it, analyzes it and figures it out to its ultimate result, you find that this small difference in a common growth into proportions of great magnitude.
An advertisement in The Courier is a little thing in itself, but it goes into thousands of homes and tells thousands of people just what you most wish them to hear.
If the advertising is honest and persistent, it will perform a useful and valuable service to both seller and buyer.

shows that the high rates now in effect are progressively becoming less productive of revenue.
That there is no incompatibility between a popular system of taxation (assuming that any taxation can be called popular) and sound business principles in making necessary levies, is demonstrated. Secretary Mellon proposes a reduction of 25 per cent in the tax on earned income as distinguished from incomes of business and investments. He would cut normal income taxes 25 per cent—from four to three per cent and from eight to six per cent. Thus the smaller incomes would substantially benefit. Further he would reduce surtax rates by commensurate their application at $10,000 instead of $8,000, and scaling them progressively upwards to 25 per cent at $100,000. Thus people in receipt of large incomes would pay less than at present, but "the treasury recommends the readjustment not in order to reduce the revenue, but as a means of saving the productivity of the surtaxes."
If the capital now seeking relief from taxation in tax-exempt securities goes into business enterprises it will also tend to bring lower costs for transportation and manufactured products, thus helping to relieve the farmer. With no addition to "tax-exempt" public authorities will be more careful of incurring indebtedness, the ultimate effect being a reduction of local taxation. Of the total reduction of income taxes, Mr. Mellon estimates that 70 per cent of the benefit would accrue to incomes of less than $10,000.
He proposes elimination of a number of nuisance and war taxes and some technical adjustments in accounting regulations in the interest of fairness. But the major fact is that Mr. Mellon has laid before Congress and the country a comprehensive plan of taxation relief where it is most needed, that bears the stamp of practicability. It is a business man's proposal and it should be considered as a business proposition.

Next to "emotional" and "marvelous" nothing will so quickly catch the public imagination as a "fact" which is "true." With a wife who says "I'm going to leave him, it's none of my business," Copyright National Newspaper Service

What if some man appears the weak and puny one is churlish when they speak.
What if some lie and cheat and steal and profit by their misdeeds?
What if some false man fools the throng?
Don't you go wrong!
What if dishonor seems to pay, if some unscrupulous goes away,
If by his power some man climb while patient men bide his time,
Nothing that's false can live for long,
Don't you go wrong!
What if you fancy now and then life is unfair to earnest men,
That obscure grow rich and sham grows great,
Let love of right not turn to hate,
Against false wheedlers be you strong,
Don't you go wrong!

Eight tons of coal are saved every year for every horsepower brought into action in a new hydro-electric development, according to the Pennsylvania Public Service Information Committee.
The diminishing supply of coal with the rapid mounting of cost, to which every household can testify, makes imperative the rapid development of all available sources of waterpower, the committee declares.
At the present time the developed horsepower in the United States is approximately 10,000,000 and the potential power that can be developed under present methods of energy transformation is 60,000,000. Under present conditions 30,000,000 tons of coal are conserved yearly. With all the water-power harnessed in the United States 400,000,000 tons of coal, or the amount consumed by the industries, public utilities and railroads could be saved by hydraulic development.
The figures on the undeveloped water supply are conservative. The amount of the total available water power has been estimated at from 50,000,000 to 100,000,000. Such estimate is uncertain and open to the possibility that when need compels future advance, engineering may enable us to utilize waterpower which cannot now be utilized.
If, when traveling, you see the electric transmission lines pass by you in increasing numbers, you realize then that they are doing what the coal trains have done and are still doing, that is, carrying from source to user the country's energy supply without which our civilization would cease.

Years of Kidney Trouble
Vanquished By Dreo

Orlando Fleisher is 73 years old. He has been a well known figure to the people of Connelville and the vicinity for more than a quarter of a century. His health had been failing for several years. And a friend of his had suggested that he try Dreo, citing the thousands of people around Connelville who had benefited by it. He bought a bottle of Dreo and—but let him tell his story.

"For several years I had been troubled with kidney trouble which seemed to get worse with time. I couldn't enjoy a good night's sleep. I began to lose weight."

"Then a lady suggested that I try Dreo."

"The results have been splendid, more than I anticipated considering my age."

"I have now taken four bottles of Dreo. My kidneys are as well as they have ever been. More, I have gained even seven pounds in weight."

"I enthusiastically recommend Dreo to anyone having kidney trouble."

"Dreo, being a combination of the juices and extracts of herbal plants, combines very readily with the juices of the stomach and that is why its action is so prompt and so positive. It is soon noticed after taking Dreo the gas stops forming, the food digests perfectly giving strength to the entire body and renewing vigor and vitality."

Dreo is being specially introduced by Connelville Drug Company and sold by druggists everywhere. Also for sale by Hoffman's Drug Store in Scotland.—Advertisement.

Price of Blood Is Going Up

By United Press.
PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13.—The price of blood has gone up and the day of the volunteer who used to offer a pint free for emergency transfusions is long past. Physicians at St. Francis Hospital call by radio and advertised in newspapers for volunteers to give a pint of blood to a recently widowed mother of five children who was in a critical condition. Eleven persons applied to the hospital in answer to the appeals and four were found to have the correct type of blood for transfusion. They were offered $25 for a pint of blood, but they would not accept, saying that the market quotation for blood today is $35 a pint up.

TWICE PROVEN

If you suffer backache, sleepless nights, tired, dull days and distressing urinary disorders, don't experiment. Read this twice-told testimony. It's Connelville evidence—doubly proven.

Mrs. M. Thorne, 206 N. Seventh St., Connelville, says: "At times my back hurt, lame and sore and pained in a dull, nagging way. I had headaches and dizziness made me stagger. My system was entirely out of order, making me feel miserable. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and in a short time the dizziness disappeared. I purchased Doan's Kidney Pills at Harman's Drug Store and always keep them on hand." (Statement given August 9, 1919.)

On December 2, 1922, Mrs. Thorne said: "I had quite a bit of trouble with backache due to kidney disorder but the timely use of Doan's Kidney Pills relieved every symptom, and cured me of the attack. I gladly confirm all I said in 1919."

Price 80c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Thorne had, Foster-McBarn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.—Advertisement.

Soup for Chilly Days.

One Mother Says:

Here is a nourishing soup that is a favorite with my little girls when they come home for a quick noon lunch. It is a peanut butter and tomato combination. Use 1½ cups of tomato juice, ½ cup of peanut butter, 1 teaspoon of salt, 1 teaspoon of paprika, and 2½ cups of boiling water. Add the tomato juice gradually to the peanut butter, and when smooth add the seasonings and the water. Simmer for ten minutes, and serve with croutons. A few drops of lemon juice may be added just before the soup is served.

Mrs. F. J. She said she could not get anything and keep it on her stomach, and she was so nervous that she could not sleep at night. Numerous remedies had failed, but after taking Nerv-Worth, she reports that she can eat and sleep much better, and is only too glad to tell what it has done for her. Give Nerv-Worth a trial today, and remember if your first trial bottle is not satisfactory, your druggist is authorized to refund your money. Sold by leading druggists.

News of Dunbar

DUNBAR, Nov. 12.—Dunbar feels she has great reason to congratulate herself on the character of her citizens successful in the recent elections. Honest, able, competent and prominent in church work, they have and deserve the confidence of not only their home community, but of the whole county.

Two important real estate deals were recently consummated in the township. Miss Virginia McClain purchased the Thomas Jose residence and lot on Ferguson road near Koffers and Robert Rankin has purchased the house and lot at Peach for formerly occupied by Mr. Ball, who with his family has located in the eastern part of the state. Mr. and Mrs. Jose moved to Church Hill in township No. 6. They contemplate purchasing another lot on Ferguson road and building a residence thereon, but the deal has not yet been closed.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company, in expanding the trestle on its siding leading to the yards of the N. H. & D. R. R. at the furnace, has put in concrete basements for the bent at the east side of the West Penn track, but as yet has done nothing to that part of the trestle which blocks the Peach-Dunbar public road. It is held by citizens to be high time this road, held up for a year and a half by the railroad company, was opened, and it is earnestly hoped Supervisor Smith may have the cooperation of the newly elected supervisor, George M. Strickler, in compelling the opening of this much-needed road in the near future.

Armistice day was observed by a number of the local stores. The schools, however, were run as usual.

Mrs. John Thorpe, who has been quite ill during the entire summer, has been worse this week. The doctors give little hope of her recovery.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Jack Peden of Pittsburgh were over Sunday visitors of Mrs. Peden's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Koffer, of "Sunnyrest," Ferguson road.

The woods are full of hunters, but their game sacks are not proportionately full. Rabbits are reported scarce, pheasants are said to be plentiful, so plentiful in fact they set on the hunters' nerves. One young sportsman Monday saw three perch on one limb, and stood and watched them for several minutes before remembering his gun. By the time he got his gun off his shoulder the birds saw him and flew, and the coal that "kept the home fires burning" to cook those grouse, was wasted.

The elections in North Union township resulted in a sweeping victory for the anti-ring candidates in spite of the fact that some say underhand work was done immediately before the election. Wiped off the map in the primary the ring and its allies appealed to the people to defeat Henry Titterton and A. F. Springer, because they were personal friends of Supervising Principal Thomas H. Meann, whose position some of them would like to have, but the only effect this appeal had was to increase the majority of the two men attacked. The three directors elected are Republicans, and the ring desired to supplant the two above named with Democrats. How well they succeeded is shown by the vote: John Darby, R, 1,133; A. E. Springer, R, 871; Henry Titterton, R, 864; Amos Matthews, D, 464; J. G. Hartford, D, 308; W. J. Newlin, D, 135.

A fight was also made against Jack Johnston, Republican, the champion road builder, for the township supervisor, with similar results, viz: Johnston, 1,010; David Yeardley, D, 160. These Democrats were not ring candidates, but the ring endeavored to defeat the regular Republican candidates with them. Crushing defeat at the primary and the close repeated in enhanced quantities at the regular election felt that it is time for the ring to slay the swan song, that its epitaph may be written.

My Experience is that
DR. CALDWELL'S
SYRUP PEPSIN
Is just what you need.

This Will Make Digestion Easy

WHAT the dyspeptic needs is not soda and charcoal and breath perfume but a medicine that will help his bowels to move regularly, for dyspepsia and constipation are allied. If you will take Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin systematically as the directions on the package call for you will soon digest your food properly and pass it out normally, and heartburn, belching, distension, nervousness and bloating will vanish. In time you can dispense with all medicine as Syrup Pepsin will have exercised the intestinal and stomach muscles so they act for themselves. Mr. Lewis F. Scholtz of Rome, Ga., Mr. Victor Knedler of 3625 Bank St., Louisville, Ky., and hosts of others will verify this.

World Acclaims Success

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the prescription of a well-known physician of that name who practiced successfully for 47 years. It has been on the market thirty years and is today the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. Thousands of families have it in their medicine chest ready when any member shows signs of dyspepsia, constipation, torpid liver, sour stomach, biliousness, coated tongue, offensive breath, headache, such ailments that indicate deranged stomach and bowels. Many serious diseases are prevented by this timely aid.

Formula Plainly Stated

Have no hesitancy giving Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin to any one young or old. It is a mild, gentle laxative from natural sources. It will not cramp or grip. Economical for families and fully guaranteed. You will find it a great improvement in taste and action over castor oil, or "candy cathartics" made from coal-tar that cause skin diseases, remove the bloom from the teeth, set in water or powder that concentrate the blood and dry the skin.

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine. It is a physician's prescription. Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intends. They should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on a merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

New Sugar Beet Digger. It is said that a machine for toppling and digging sugar beets promises to eliminate much of the back-breaking work of harvesting. The apparatus resembles a potato digger in general outline, but in front of the flaps that remove the roots from the ground is a revolving disk twenty inches in diameter, so adjusted by a spring and roller that it measures the cutting distance from the top of the beet instead of from the ground. Immediately behind the disk are two flaps that remove the beets from the ground and deliver them to an endless chain elevator that frees them of dirt and dumps them out behind the machine. As the top and head of the sugar beet contains an acid that counteracts the sugar in the root of the beet, a harvester must measure the beets and cut them at the right place.

The Paramount

"LUCK"—With Johnny Hines in one of the best roles of his screen career, is on view today at this theatre.

Johnny, as Bob Carter one of the life rich, suddenly comes to realize his opportunity to win the girl he loves comes along. The clever idea that he puts over to develop a tract of land is a real winner. He hits upon the idea of giving a dance, five dollars for each ticket and each ticket numbered. One lucky number is to be drawn and the fortunate holder thereof is to receive a completely out-fitted house.

However the plan does not work out as well as was hoped, so Johnny decides to auction off the house. He has made a bet that he can earn ten thousand dollars inside of a year and he realizes that he has to go some to do it, having but one more day to win out.

Of course it is the girl that eventually helps out. She starts the bidding and soon things are going at a lively pace. Bob comes out on top and everything is lovely.

There are more genuine thrills and humorous situations packed into "Luck" than in a dozen or more ordinary features. It's just about the finest yet in the way of screen entertainment and has been specially booked by the management of the Paramount Theatre.

Wednesday and Thursday, Milton Sills will be seen in "The Marriage Chance."

The Soisson

"THE GIRL OF THE GOLDEN WEST," showing today and tomorrow at this theatre, presents J. Warren Kerrigan in the stellar role. As a rule, western drama, especially those which depict life of the gold rush days, are over-crowded with cheap, meaningless melodrama which leaves no impression upon the mind and does not really entertain. In "The Girl of the Golden West," however, Director Carewe has, as he did in "Mighty Like a Rose," brought in the strong, human touches and developed the odd romance of the famous Belasco stage triumph in a way that holds one's undivided attention from the first title to the last flash.

First of all, "The Girl of the Golden West" has no Broadway cowboys, no Indians, no running gun fights and no

Tornadoes Add Another Victim to List; Defeat Natrona Olympics, 3-0

Drop-Kick by Bye in Second Quarter Is Only Counter of Game.

WHISTLE STOPS SCORE

The Connelville Tornadoes, minus the services of their star tackle Kock and Webster, yesterday had a tough time landing the Natrona Olympics but with the assistance of Byes' toe, came through with colors still flying. The final score was 3-0 for Connelville.

The locals were just one foot from the goal line when the game ended and another rush would in all probability have carried the ball across the goal line. The last play was a drop-kick by Bye in the second quarter.

Connelville hardly expected the opposition put up by Natrona and possibly from too much confidence did not have the punch the team usually displays. The Tornadoes came within a hair of scoring in the first quarter. The game had hardly gotten under way until the home team got the ball on downs on Natrona's 35-yard line. From there it was carried to the Natrona five-yard line and went to the visitors on downs when Bye laced a foot in his last plunge for a first down. Had the distance been made the locals could hardly have been prevented from crossing the goal line.

Near the end of the second quarter the Tornadoes drove into visitors' territory again, but were halted on the 25-yard line. Bye dropped back to the 35-yard line and sent a drop-kick between the goal posts. The score was 3-0 and it remained that way at the close of the struggle.

It was hard-fought football throughout. The two teams battled fiercely and a number of time-outs were necessary because of exceptionally hard bumps.

On the final drive of the Tornadoes the team received a punt on their own 20-yard line. Francis carried it back 15 yards to the Tornado 35-yard line. A plunge netted nothing and then Leighty went through the line for seven yards. Bye added four more for a first down. Natrona was penalized five yards for being offside and Pittsment circled and for 12 additional yards. Francis punched the line for four yards and Bye added an equal number. Pittsment also struck hard, glancing off tackle for another quarter of yards. It again made first down and the ball was on the Natrona 24-yard line. The Tornadoes were in their stride. Leighty smashed the first line defense for five yards. Francis was held up with a single yard gain. Then Leighty rammed again, gaining four and one-half yards for another first down. The ball lay on the 12-1/2 yard line, within the shadow of the goal. Pittsment circled and for five and one-half yards. Bye failed to gain. Leighty got a yard and Francis carried the ball to the two yard line for a first down. Leighty hit and gained a yard and a half. Then the whistle blew and the game was over. The ball lay just inside the goal line.

South Side Preps Lose To Big Team

The South Side Preps playing their initial game of the season as a preliminary at Fayette Field yesterday afternoon, lost to the East Huntingdon Township High team by a score of 20-7 but were glorified, even though vanquished.

The kids won the admiration of several hundred who witnessed the clash. The visitors scored two touchdowns in the first half and one in the second. The school team holds the record of having defeated Youngwood High School and having a 0-0 tie with Westinghouse High. Dunbar Township High defeated the same team 20-0.

The little Preps looked almost ridiculous alongside three six-foot players of the visiting aggregation. But nerve and determination were big factors in the game and the heavier opponents had the time of their lives scoring what points they did get.

The Preps hit "hard and low" and seldom failed to get their man. Shaver played a great game at tackle. To spectators he seemed to get as many as every other tackle. He weighs about 110 pounds.

Struble, subbing at an end, is about as big as a pigpen as one man expressed it. He proved his worth when the Preps made their touchdown, however. He Huntington was circling an end in the third quarter when the ball was fumbled. Walton grasped it and started goalward. It seemed certain he would be intercepted when from somewhere little Struble appeared, running like a deer. "Take him out," fans cried to the little chap as he neared the lanky pursuer of Walton. The lad literally threw himself through the air and smashed squarely into the knees of the would-be tackler. Walton, thus saved, was able to cross the goal line before being downed. He ran 15 yards. Chick Evans kicked the goal.

With the count then 14-7 the Preps battled hard. Their strength was waning, however, in the face of the strong visiting attack and when Evans fumbled in the middle of the field the school team marched, almost unopposed over the goal line.

For Football Fans.
High School plays away from home this week going to Belmont on Friday afternoon. The team will get down to business this evening after a good rest and there will be no slackening up. The tokens are not over-confident but will not stop trying Friday until they have won from the Mon river aggregation.

John Fentile manager of the Connelville Tornadoes said he intended to go to Brownsville today to endeavor to make arrangements for the locals and the Brownsville Independents to meet on December 1. Brownsville is not at all anxious to play the locals. It is reported in spite of the fact that last season Billy Long and his proteges promised to play here last fall. The sportsmanship of the Brownsville outfit will be tested when Manager Fentile endeavors to make arrangements for the game.

There are two more High School games to be played here. They are the Greensburg and Dunbar Township clashes. One will be on November 14 and the other on Thanksgiving Day.

The student section made a big difference at the High School game Saturday and even larger bodies are expected to be at the Greensburg and Dunbar Township games. Some cheering duels may be looked for if the two contests are both visiting teams will be accompanied by large numbers of rooters.

Snively of Princeton

Coach Bob Roper had the Princeton football squad get early for practice this fall and under the leadership of Captain Snively the team has been a big factor in Eastern games.

Tragic Disappointment
One of the season's tragic disappointments was Philadelphia. The Macks were regarded as one of those dark horses which might do anything. For a while the Athletics tore through the league in seasonal style. The Athletics plunged and now are right back where they were when the curtain rang down last season. Their plunge came as a bitter disappointment to baseball men in general. Most of all it was a bitter disappointment to the Athletics. Before fandom in general became aware of the serious nature of Siler's illness the Browns were conceded a royal chance.

EXCITING WALRUS HUNT DESCRIBED

Explorer Tells of Thrilling Experiences in Arctic.

STILL USE THE HARPOON

A thrilling walrus hunt was described to the pupils of three Detroit schools recently by Roy Snell, Arctic explorer and author.

"The first day I ever saw a walrus," said Mr. Snell, "we drove our skin boat right into the midst of a lot of them, and, before shooting, at all, harpooned four."

"First, three-looker hunters they were, too. Weighing as much as two or three large horses, with tusks of solid ivory two and a half feet long, leaping out of the water, barking and bellowing with a strange hoarse ark-ark-ark, ark, ark-ark, they were enough to inspire terror in the heart of a harder hunter than myself. Fortunately I had my moving-picture camera with me, and in the excitement of taking pictures, I forgot many things. I forgot that we were ten miles from land; that a loop of one of these monsters snare across our boat would smash it like an egg without a shell; I forgot that I could not swim, and that the Arctic water was freezing, icy cold; forgot everything in my effort to get Mr. Walrus' picture while his mustache was smooth and straight and his face wore its sweet smile."

Bread to the Eskimo.

"To the Eskimo the walrus and seal are bread and butter. He may get a whale, and he may not; most likely not. The chances are about three to one that he will not get one polar bear in a season. The little brown seal is with him winter and summer. Great herds of walrus pass south through Behring straits, going north in the spring and south in winter. Great piles of walrus meat save the village from the dread starving time."

Mr. Snell declared the ancient hunting weapons of the Eskimo have been discarded for firearms. One, however, remains—the harpoon.

"These walrus are stored into," he went on, "were having some sort of frolic, or so it seemed to me. Leaping high out of the water, uttering that hoarse harok, harok, harok, and with their white tusks gleaming like swords in the light, they would perform a graceful curve, then go splashing head foremost into the brine."

Walrus Attacks Boat.

"For the most part they paid no more attention to us than a family of turkeys do to a drifting log. One big fellow, however, began to eye us. With three lungs he was close to our boat. The next second his tusks and a half of weight would have dropped square across our bow had it not been for a sudden warning shout and the quick banging of him over the head with a rifle barrel."

"He was not, however, to escape so easily. One of the largest of the herd, with long and perfect tusks, he was a desirable prize. In some manner, however, the harpoon thrower, had marked him for his own."

"Leaping to the prow and holding in one hand a six-foot shaft and in the other a coil of rawhide rope, he stood there and waited."

"Our walrus rose. There was a tense second as the harpoon's arm shot back and up; then, as swift as an arrow, came down. The harpoon sank through the skin. There followed the solid thrust as the point buried itself in the tough hide of the walrus."

Great Herd Vanishes.

"He went down and tried to sink us; he plowed through the brine to give us a ride. We saw his angry visage as now and again he rose for air; but even then we did not attempt to shoot him. This was the most harvest of the season. Our walrus would half fill our boat. There were others all about us. We must have more. Got them we did. Before my hardy hunters took to their rifles four walrus were sawing away at skin ropes fastened securely to our boat."

"When the fourth walrus had been successfully landed to the boat, every man of the crew seized his rifle and began firing. Instantly, as if by magic, the great herd disappeared."

"A walrus is a hard creature to kill. The skull is fully two inches thick. A bullet glances off it as it would off a marble ball. In time, however, we had our four killed. Since there was no shore near, we were obliged to drag them to the boat, and, after fastening them by flippers and tugs to the sides, to cut them up in the water."

Water's Quick-Change Artist.
The prince of Wales is in the front ranks when it comes to quick-change artists, as was witnessed during a recent five-hour visit to the famous Harrow school. The prince arrived at noon dressed in the uniform of a colonel of the Welsh guards and inspected the officers' training corps. He changed into morning clothes to lunch with the head master, and then put on flannels for an hour at racquets. Afterward he donned a lounge suit for tea and kept this on when he drove back to the palace.

Grimes of Brooklyn Won Pennant for the Giants

Many Pittsburgh fans will agree with Bill Phelon, Cincinnati scribe, when he says that Burleigh Grimes, Brooklyn pitcher, practically won the pennant for the New York Giants.

Grimes, who formerly wore the livery of the Pittsburgh Pirates, started against his old teammates six times this season, and beat them on five occasions. Those games settled the Pirates. If they had all gone the other way, Pittsburgh would have been right up in the fight for the flag, and the Reds would have been ahead of the Giants.

But Grimes did more than put Pittsburgh out of the running. Several weeks ago Grimes was pitching against the Reds. He hit Ed Roush a fearful blow, and broke a rib. That accident took Roush out of the Cincinnati lineup. While he was absent, Phil Moran's men went all to the bad. They fell with a thud, and Phelon figures that Grimes' blow put Cincinnati out of the race.

Official Scorer Blamed for Mix-Up in Schedule

One for the book is told in explanation of why the Richmond and Petersburg teams of the Virginia League played one more game than the schedule called for and thus brought on a controversy. It is said the Richmond official scorer was sick one day so engaged another man to keep the score for him. The score wasn't made up to his liking, so he threw it away. Nobody else kept account of the games played. In the closing days of the season the score keeper was asked how many games remained. He checked up, having discarded one sheet from his book, found himself one short so told the management of the club it had no more games to go. And at extra game was played.

A Slight Error.

He was a very patient and long-suffering young man, but when at last he arrived at the corner where they had arranged to meet he ventured a remonstrance. "During, you are late," he said, mildly.

"Only a few minutes," she protested in an injured tone. "I said I'd be here at 7 o'clock and it's only twenty minutes past."

"Oh," sighed the young man, "then you must have mistaken the day. I've been waiting here since last night."

Women on the Farm.

The latest census showed that no fewer than 21,000 women in the United States worked as farm laborers away from home, while 57,642 helped till home acres.

JOSEPH GREER and His DAUGHTER

by
HENRY KITCHELL

BOBBS-MERRILL CO.

For hours he sat in the chair, his face from a spring upon her, smiling, sipping whisky, meditating in a mood of deepening melancholy. Jennie MacArthur had warned him that his plan wouldn't work, and it looked as if Jennie, once more, was right. It would have worked, though, but for his internal temper. The girl was like him: was more, in every way, his daughter than either of them had dreamed possible. They might, if he had not seen the possibility to him, tonight, have become the fiercest sort of comrades—an alliance, defensive and offensive, against the world! He'd like to prove Jennie wrong, for once. Where the devil, he wondered, had Tris picked up that fantastic idea about him and Jennie? She couldn't have thought of such a thing by herself. Someone must have told her the slender in so many words. He'd manage to find out who the traitor was, if it was the last—no, next to last—thing he ever did.

He got up, stiffly, feeling old, and went out into the passage on his way to bed. Outside his daughter's door he stopped to listen. Until that moment it hadn't occurred to him to wonder how she had spent the intervening hours. Had they been as miserable for her as for him? Had she been weeping quietly over her own defeat and hope? The thought brought a lump into his throat.

She wasn't weeping now. It was dead still in there. Then came her voice, young, clear, unsmothered. "Is that you, Dad?" His own would not at once respond to command, and she went on, "If it is, come in." It was an invitation he'd never had, nor sought, before.

She switched on the night-lamp as he entered, and patted the edge of the bed as the place where she wanted him to sit. When he was seated she held out both hands to him, displaying the full length of her bare arms. His fingertips were upon them both, in the livid discoloration of bruises. "Good Lord, Tris," he cried, aghast, "did I do that to you?"

She nodded with a smile of friendly relief. "It bruise awfully easy," she explained. "Sometimes when it hasn't hurt at all. It's been kind of lucky, in a way. It kept grandfather and the rest from getting rough with me. They never punished me except by shutting me up, and I could usually get out, somehow."

"You can't go back to that," he said. "No," she admitted, soberly. "I couldn't go back there, even if Mr. Whitlington wasn't going to marry mother. But I can go back to Holly-wood. I'm practically sure I can get a job there."

"Then you can't forgive me?" he asked. "Of course I do!" She seemed astonished at the question. "It was mostly my fault, anyhow. It seemed as if I just had to go on mad. I don't know why—exactly. But I'm crazy about you, Dad. I think you're the most wonderful man in the world."

"Then why," he demanded, "do you talk about going off leaving me? Is it just because I wanted to hire a companion for you?"

She stirred uneasily at the question. It wasn't one, apparently, that she had a categorical answer for. "I could have got on well enough with my mother," she said at last. "If grandfather hadn't kept butting in all the time, putting ideas into her head and making her go back on things she'd promised. I hate noisy, interfering people, whoever they are. So when I saw those women deciding things for you—about me—changing you round just as they liked, it made me so mad I didn't care what happened."

She added, after a moment's pause, "I'm glad I found out about—Miss MacArthur, though."

"Tris," he asked, "do you mind telling me—it's just a matter of curiosity—who put an idea like that into your head? It was a kind of a thing to do, whoever did it."

"Why, nobody did it," she declared, blithely, wide-eyed. "Nobody but you and her. The way you acted together, her calling you Joe and knowing such a lot about me and telling you you needn't stay and work that day unless you liked. When you were supposed to be her boss! And the way you liked it, and wanted to sit around and talk. I don't know. It struck me as natural, that was all."

and they were trying to break in, will. They didn't though." She paused to smile at him. "I guess I turned out like you, after all."

"Bless your heart!" he murmured. His vision of her blurred with tears, and at the invitation of her hands he bent down and kissed her, she holding him, for a moment, in a tight embrace. Then she pushed him away, and with her palms blotted the tears from her own eyes.

"I hated you once," she said, with a shaky laugh. "Oh, for years, and years. Because you left me there with them. I didn't think I was going to love you when I got your letter. The reason I came was because you said I was of age and had a right to decide things for myself. I made up my mind I'd hold you to that. I thought if I got you sort of silly about me it would be easy to make you. I didn't figure on getting silly about you. But I have, and that's why I've got to go away again."

He tried to protest that this conclusion was nonsense, but she wasn't ready to hear him yet. "I'd hate any governess you hired for me. I'd hate anybody who told you tales about me—or advised you what to do with me. I wouldn't mind, if I didn't love you. I'd get what I wanted, somehow—just the way I always did at home. But I'd be miserable—treating you like that—because you aren't like them."

She was weeping now in a way that made contained speech impossible. She sat erect and clung to him. "Oh, Dad," she wailed, "I don't want to go." Until she was quiet he held her without a word, but when the soothing of his hands had had its effect, he said, "All right, Tris. You win. I guess I've been a fool about it. I hope so, anyway. But I can't let you go. Not after this!"

Her eyes were luminous through her tears. He'd never, he thought, seen anything so rapturously lovely. "You mean it, Dad?" she cried. "You'll let me be a real grown-up? Run your house for you, and everything—like Margaret Gaven does Henry's?"

He roared at that, and she laughed with him, but at the end of it she asked, for reassurance, "Really, Dad?"

"It's on the level," he told her, soberly. "You can write your own contract, little girl."

There was another hateful echo in that, and it was a moment before her enthusiasm got an appropriate response from him. She shook him by the shoulder. "Say you think it's going to be wonderful," she commanded.

"Yes, my dear," he said, "I believe it is."

John Williamson surprised Joe by coming to him with an idea about fax. An eccentric gentleman farmer he knew had been talking to him and, more or less, frightening him about it. He was a retired wholesale grocer, Nicholson by name, and he had a big place out on the Fox river. He devoted an energetic leisure to the cultivation of hobbies, and had been experimenting for the past two or three years, with the growing of Belgian flax, the plan being to process it by hand and provide a domestic winter occupation for farmers' wives.

He was bitterly skeptical about Joe's project for making any use of American seed flax, and he went on to say some things that worried John a little. "He filled me full of details," John concluded, "and I can't remember them. I'd like to take you out to meet him some time and hear for yourself what he's got to say."

"He filled me full of details," John concluded.

Joe said, seriously, that he'd be very glad to go. There was nothing new about old Nicholson's facts, and nothing very startling about his theories, but he'd be worth talking to, anyhow, and his stand of Belgian flax worth seeing. If that stuff could be made to grow in this soil and climate it might be worth a lot to them.

He didn't mention to John that, for three months, he had put in odd hours designing a harvester that would pull flax up by the roots. He was always as secretive with his immature ideas as a cat with her blind kittens.

"All right," said John, "we'll plan to go out there some time, within the next week or so."

Joe grinned. He could manage it tomorrow, he said, though it was a pretty full day. And he was going North tomorrow night.

Special Selling of Winter Fashions Begins Tomorrow!

LAST night's advertising told you that "Great things are coming." In the advertisement you're reading now you see how that prophecy is beginning to be fulfilled. Tomorrow inaugurates a special selling of winter fashions in which garments of quality and distinction take new low prices—just at the time when a new wardrobe for Thanksgiving is the thought uppermost in every woman's mind. This is the first in a series of special events that you will follow with a great deal of interest.

Over 50 Smart Dresses
Are In Three New Groups - At
$24.98 $34.98 $44.98

THE materials are Satin Canton—Canton Crepe—Georgette—Jacquard Crepe—Figured Crepe—Charmeen—Poliet Twill—Sport Plaids—and Flax Crepe. Practically every smart style of the season is represented—models straight of line, side draped, trimmed with beads, lace or embroidery. Wrap around coat models in wool fabrics and frocks whose skirts are correctly flounced or tiered.

Black—the ever becoming—is the featured color but for variety you have navy, tan, carnal and brown to choose from. Frocks at $24.98 were $29.75 and $35. Frocks at $34.98 were $39.75 and $45. Frocks at $44.98 were $49.75 to $59.50. It will be interesting to remember that every one of these frocks is fashion-right in every respect and fully measures up to the Wright-Metzler standard of quality.

Such Pretty New Coats
Are Grouped At These Lower Prices
$24.98 $34.98 $44.98

A NEW Winter coat is a necessity this year, because of the radical changes from the fashions of last winter. This selling makes it very easy to obtain one. Sizes range 14 to 48.

AT $24.98—are clever sport coats in such good materials as Camelot, Peltre and English Tweeds. The models are smartly styled and made for service. A few dress coats are also in the group. Former prices were $35 and $39.75.

At $34.98—come sport coats of an even better quality of material—trimmed with rich collars of red fox or caracul. Also plain dress coats in warm, sturdy fabrics. Former prices were $45 and $49.75.

At $44.98—sumptuous models in such luxurious fabrics as Geroni, Grenada, Pentalure and Lustrosa are trimmed with violet squirrel, wolf, mole and beaver. Formerly $59.50 and $69.50.

50 Tailored Suits - - $19.98

THE price is so very low and the suits are so very attractive that we are almost tempted to say that you should buy whether you have immediate need of a suit or not!

They are plain tailored styles, developed in tricotine, carefully tailored—suits that keep their shape and wear in a way that delights the thrifty. The sizes range all the way from 16 to 14.

Because their former prices were $25 and $29.75, they bring you very appreciable savings at this new low price.

And we feel that they will appeal particularly to school teachers, business women—to the thrifty mother of a growing family—to anyone, in short, who appreciates the fact that a plain tailored suit is always good style and one of the most attractive garments one can find.
